The Daily Press.

HONGKONG, NOVEMBER 12TH, 1913.

A WEEK has now passed since the Fifth of November, when President YUAN SHIH-KAI threw his "bomb" at the Houses of Parliament at Peking. By a stroke of the pen the PRESIDENT unseated upwards of three hundred members of Parliament, and proclaimed the dissolution of the party to which they belonged. As it has been claimed that the Kuomintang (or Opposition party) had a membership of something like 600,000 throughout the country, the PRESIDENT'S coup d'état seemed to us one likely to increase rather than diminish the difficulties of government in China. Perhaps it is too early yet to feel confident that the step taken will be to the ultimate benefit of China, but it is nevertheless a most noteworthy circumstance that the PRESIDENT'S action has evoked no storm of protest from any part of the country. This may be due to some extent to a knowledge that the military forces of the country are prepared to deal with anything in the nature of a revolutionary rising and, again, to the knowledge that the Press of the country has been "advised to be careful" in discussing the PRESIDENT'S orders, and that the telegraph offices have been forbidden to accept messages in code. A day or two prior to the launching of the PRESIDENT'S thunderbolt, the Chinese Post Office at Shanghai gave notice to the China Republic, a Kuomintang organ published in English and French, from offices in the French Settlement at Shanghai, that, under orders from the Ministry of Communications, copies of the paper would no longer be distributed by the Chinese Post Office, and this was followed on November 5th by a peremptory order of the French Consul prohibiting the publication and distribution of the paper in the French Settlement. With the Opposition Press puzzled and anybody issuing printed matter or making speeches or holding secret meetings in the name of the Kuomintang "to be dealt with as rebels"—which means in China being shot without trial—it is difficult to correctly gauge popular opinion on the coup d'état. In the course of an article contributed recently to The Times by that journal's correspondent at Peking it was remarked that "the half-baked students who constitute the vast majority of the Young Chinese, whether they number something under or over 130,000, are still spread out over the Provinces, particularly in the South, where there is permanent antipathy to control from Peking. Thus although 'the war against YUAN' has failed, practically the whole of the revolutionary element in China has a standing grievance against YUAN SHIH-KAI. The ground is favourable to future sedition. It is true that 99 per cent. of the people of China are uninterested in politics and on the side of peace and quiet. But it is the few articulate ones who count." That has been proved twice in just as many years, and it remains to be seen whether the PRESIDENT is able to render them inarticulate until he has carried into effect his own ideas for setting the government of the country on a stable foundation. It is of interest to observe that the PRESIDENT in one of his Mandates reaffirms the policy enunciated in his inauguration speech and expresses his determination to instil new life into the Republican Government. When the first news was received a week ago that the PRESIDENT had unseated some three hundred Republican members of Parliament "because they were retarding progress," it looked as though the PRESIDENT were aiming at the entire subversion of Republican Government, since the order seemed in absolute conflict with the article in the Provisional Constitution guaranteeing to the people "liberty of speech, writing, publication, meeting and forming societies." But the fuller summary of the PRESIDENT'S Mandates, which we print to-day, puts a different complexion on the subject. The PRESIDENT'S motive is here shown to be that he regards the Kuomintang as a seditious organisation, and his right to suppress seditious societies can hardly be questioned. Thus is his action brought seemingly within the limits of the Constitution, but the fatal weakness of his position is that there has been no sort of judicial inquiry into the charge, and one of the first articles of the Constitution provides that "no citizen of the Republic shall be arrested, imprisoned, tried or punished, except in accordance with the law." But China is a Republic in name only. Young China has had its chance to rule, and has made it abundantly clear that China is unfitted yet for full Parliamentary Government. The best hopes of the country are seen to lie in a PRESIDENT vested practically with the powers of an autocrat. Dr. SUN YAT-SEN in his recent apologia, in the form of a letter to a friend at Peking, acknowledges that YUAN SHIH-KAI has "great ability, deep knowledge, and rich experience," but laments that they are all of "the old stuff of the despotic age unsuitable for the civilized age of the new administration in China." But Dr. SUN'S opinion no longer carries in China the weight it did two years ago, and it is patent to all that YUAN SHIH-KAI enjoys to-day a larger measure of public confidence than he has had at any time since the overthrow of the monarchy. While he has taken special pains to make clear in his Mandates that he is not seeking to suppress Parliamentary institutions, it is nevertheless evident that he means the Parliament to be more of a deliberative than a legislative body, and the experience of the past two years has shown indeed that the time has not yet arrived when China can form a Parliament fitted to discharge the functions which belong to legislative bodies in the West. It is unlikely, of course, that this view will be shared by the politicians against whom the PRESIDENT launched his thunderbolt, but if YUAN SHIH-KAI is able to maintain peace and carry out the progressive policy to which he is committed, he will retain the confidence of the great bulk of his countrymen and of the Foreign Powers, and the historian of the times will have little cause in a full review of the circumstances to condemn the unconstitutional character of the step the PRESIDENT has taken in the interests of progress.

The Hon. Rufus H. Thayer, Judge of the U.S. Court for China, who is leaving for Home this week, was the guest of honor at a farewell dinner given to him last week at the residence of Dr. Wu Ting-fang in Gordon Road, Shanghai. Among the guests were Sir and Lady J. S. Lockhart, Mr. Tang Shao-yi and others, and the retiring Judge was the recipient of many good wishes.

At the Magistracy yesterday, before Mr. Hazeland, Mr. Dillon, of the Public Works Department, prosecuted a Chinese from Yau-mat for maintaining a structure about his premises contrary to the Ordinance and for which he had no authority. He told the Magistrate that the defendant had been up before, and had told his Worship that the place did not belong to him, but when he (Mr. Dillon) got back to him on the spot he admitted that the house was his. He was trying to "fool" his Worship. Defendant was fined $10 or a month, and ordered to comply with the Regulations.

Two Chinese were arrested on board the Australian liner Aldenhorn on Sunday night for being in possession of two tins of opium, containing five taels in each. The men appeared before Mr. P. A. Hazeland at the Magistracy yesterday, and declared that the opium was for their own personal use. His Worship said that it would be very hard for the men, provided they were smokers, if they were not allowed to smoke on board. Defendants affirmed that the Opium Farm people had told them that they were allowed to have five taels in their possession. In reply to his Worship, Mr. Hoggarth, of the Opium Farm, said it was quite probable that they had been told so. An employee on the ship was practically in the same position as a passenger, if he were an opium smoker. Inspector Kerr remarked that each passenger was allowed five mace per day. If the full amount was absorbed, the opium would only last ten days. Mr. A. O. Lang (of Messrs. Gibb, Livingston & Co.) said he did not know if the crew were allowed to smoke opium on board. If they did, they were not likely to allow their officers to see them. His Worship discharged the men with a caution.

THE GUILDHALL BANQUET.

NOTABLE SPEECHES BY CABINET MINISTERS.

LONDON, November 11th.

Lord Mayor's Day was showery, but the decorated streets were thronged with people. There was an unusually fine military display, and also a representation of a Lord Mayor's show in the Seventeenth Century, when the New River scheme was completed. Sir Vansittart Bowater, the new Lord Mayor, was warmly cheered.

At the Guildhall Banquet there attended the usual brilliant company of Cabinet Ministers, Diplomats, Peers, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chief Justice (Sir Rufus Isaacs), Naval and Military officers, and prominent City men.

MR. CHURCHILL ON BRITAIN'S NAVAL FORCE.

Mr. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, replying to the toast of the Imperial Forces, said that next year we would have a force of 1,500,000 sailors and marines, the largest on record. He emphasised the part played by Londoners in regard to the Navy, and said they met that night under circumstances which were free from danger to European peace, but there must be no relaxation of effort. The Estimates for 1914 showed a substantial increase. The First Lord declared that even in the region of the air the Navy need not fear comparison with any other country.

General Sir John French, replying on behalf of the Army, expressed his satisfaction at the presence of numbers of soldiers of the Dominions at the Army Manœuvres. This, he said, attested the growth, efficiency, and strength of the Overseas Army.

THE PRIME MINISTER ON THE BALKAN IMBROGLIO.

The Rt. Hon. H. H. Asquith, Prime Minister, who was cheered on rising, replied to the toast of His Majesty's Ministers. He said that years ago they were witnessing a conflict between Turkey and the Allied Balkan States—a conflict which had no sooner ended than it was followed by an outbreak of hostilities between the victorious Allies. The clash of arms had now happily ceased, but thousands of lives had been sacrificed, millions of treasure spent, vast tracts of territory devastated, and, above all, the inevitable horrors of war. Things had been done and suffered which had shocked and repelled the whole civilised world. It was too soon to draw a debtor and creditor account and say whether there had been, or would be, a balance gained or lost. Heavy indeed was the responsibility which lay on the shoulders of the States directly concerned for the future of the populations, for whose interests, under the new distribution of power in the Balkans, they had severally become trustees. It was an easy task to blame Europe, but although they had shown themselves impotent to prevent or curtail the lamentable effusion of blood, yet to anyone who remembered the history of the Eastern Question it should be a matter both for surprise and satisfaction that the area of conflict had been so circumscribed.

THE POWERS IN ACCORD.

The Prime Minister emphasised that for a generation past it had been the one main pre-occupation in European diplomacy to prevent the re-opening of that question in the belief that it could not be revised without the certainty of open dissension and grave risk of a possible war between the Powers themselves. The one feature of international history during the past year, over which it was possible to look back with unqualified admiration, was that these apprehensions had been completely falsified. It was true that events resolved themselves sometimes in a fashion which seemed to menace indirectly the susceptibilities or interests of particular Powers. There had been moments of grave anxiety, but by the exercise of patience and tact, of self-restraint in some quarters, and of strenuous goodwill in others, those difficulties had been overcome, and they in London might recall with pride that the united voice of Europe ascribed the leading part in this arduous and beneficent task to Sir Edward Grey. (Cheers.)

THE INTEGRITY OF ASIA MINOR.

The Foreign Offices of Europe, continued the Premier, had plenty of business still before them in connection with Albania and the Balkans. It would be too much to say that they were satisfied with such a settlement as had already been made, but they, at any rate, were resigned to it. They were prepared with a goodwill, and common desire for the continuance of peace to make the best of it. Another cause for satisfaction was that the Asiatic Provinces of Turkey had not been involved in the conflict. (Applause.) It was the Government's desire that the integrity of these Dominions should not be infringed. In them were holy places of the Mahomedan religion, held sacred by the whole of the Mussulmans, many millions of whom were loyal and devoted subjects of the British Crown. (Cheers.) Great Britain would gladly offer any help or protection which the Turkish Government might invite, without forgetting the three other Powers who had special concern in the well-being and development of Asia Minor.

THE POSITION IN CHINA.

There were other parts of the world confronted with special perplexities and dangers. This had been the most critical year in the history of China. The Chinese Republic had now taken its place among the politics of the world, and, in common with other nations, Great Britain had recognised it. It would be an impertinence to comment at that moment on its internal affairs, but in view of our relations in the past and the vast interests of British trade which were bound up with its future development, they were only anxious to see the authority of a stable Central Government accepted by the Provinces and effective throughout China.

THE CIVIL WAR IN MEXICO.

Mexico was still in the throes of civil war. There had never been, and could not be, any question of political intervention on the part of Great Britain in the domestic concerns of Mexico or any Central or South American State. It was no part of our right or duty in that part of the world, at any rate, to prevent revolutions or to attempt to preclude or control Civil War. The utmost that Great Britain could do was to give what protection was possible to British lives and property in times of urgent danger and crises. A rumour had found credence in some quarters that, at a moment when the United States were taking a line of their own in regard to Mexico, Great Britain entered upon a new departure of policy deliberately opposed to that of the United States and calculated to thwart it. There was not a vestige of foundation in any such rumour. It was the 31st of March before the present Administration in the United States had an opportunity of making any declaration of policy. When the British Government recognised Señor Huerta as President ad interim of Mexico, the Government did so because, having itself neither the will nor the power to intervene, it was bound to deal with whatever was for the time being the de facto Government, and because there appeared no element except Huerta which offered any prospect of a restoration of stability and order. That was on the 31st March. Since then there had been no change in the policy of the British Government. Great Britain gladly assumed that the United States' policy would have regard to the legitimate commercial interests of Mexico as well as their own. An exchange of views with the United States had been marked with perfect cordiality, and nothing could happen to disturb the common resolve to maintain a friendly and sympathetic understanding. (Cheers.) None had done more to foster that spirit than Mr. Bryce. (Cheers.)

TRADE AND THE BURDEN OF ARMAMENTS.

Mr. Asquith concluded by pointing out that there were signs on the horizon portending an inevitable slackening in the volume and velocity of the tide of trade. There had been an initiation almost everywhere of costly schemes of social reform, and, in addition to the waste of wealth and human material in actual warfare, there had been an unprecedented addition to both the land and sea apparatus of organised destruction. All that imposed a dangerous strain on the taxable capacity and credit of a nation, which must react on the springs of industry and on its general progress and material well-being. (Cheers.) His last word that night was to ask the question, Was it not time for Statesmen and every man of business to take counsel together to secure a saner and more fruitful appropriation of the common resources of mankind? (Cheers.)

JAPAN AND BRITAIN.

FRUITS OF THE ALLIANCE.

LONDON, November 11th.
At the Guildhall banquet, the Japanese Ambassador, responding for the diplomats, said that the relations of the two allied countries had never been so satisfactory or cordial as at present, and they were determined to be ever loyal to the compact binding the two nations. He trusted that that sentiment was reciprocated by Britain, and hoped that the alliance would ever continue as a guarantee of peace, consolidation, and mutual interest.

GERMAN TRANSPORT IN DISTRESS.

BERLIN, November 11th.

A wireless distress call was received from the German transport Rhenania, bound for Daressalem with 300 troops aboard. A later message, however, says that the transport is safe and is making for Lisbon.

RUSSIAN MURDER TRIAL.

BEYLIS FOUND NOT GUILTY.

KIEFF, November 11th.

Beyliss has been acquitted on the charge of murdering the Christian boy Cushinsky, for the purpose of obtaining Christian blood for use in Jewish sacrificial rites.

The jury, after two hour's deliberation, returned the following verdict: "Beyliss not guilty, but murder was committed at Zaitseff Works." Counsel for the defence protested against the mention of Zaitseff Works, where Beyliss was employed, as this was liable to be interpreted that the crime was committed by Jews. Beyliss, upon hearing the verdict, fell to the seat sobbing convulsively.

While the jury were deliberating a memorial service for the victim, Cushinsky, was proceeding in the Cathedral, which was thronged. The Bishop urged the congregation to conform to the Court's decision. All the afternoon the streets were thronged, and the police dispersed numerous gatherings. Detachments of Cossacks were stationed in the Jewish quarters. The Governor convened a meeting of representatives of the Jews, and assured them that all attempts to provoke disorder would be immediately suppressed by armed force. Beyliss remained the night in the prison.

MEXICO AND THE UNITED STATES.

HUERTA THE IMPERTURBABLE.

New York, November 11th.

According to a telegram from Mexico City received here, President Huerta appears unmoved at the situation. He is a conspicuous figure at the cafes, and indulges in relaxation in the company of his military friends. More uneasiness is apparent at the United States Embassy than at President Huerta's Palace, where it is frequently suggested that the United States will never intervene.

Americans declare that the waiting policy cannot long be maintained.

President Huerta merely reiterates that there will be a new election, at which neither he nor Senor Blanquet will be candidates.

HONGKONG & SHANGHAI BANK.

NEW LONDON PREMISES.

For the past two years the interest of not only old China hands but of London City people has been growing in regard to the progress of the new building for the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank which it was intended to open for business on 27th October. It is situated at 9, Gracechurch Street, a few doors from the corner of Cornhill.

The new building is a handsome one, both outside and inside, but especially the latter, white and coloured marbles having been employed with fine effect for utilitarian and decorative purposes throughout the interior, while the woodwork for desks, counters and fittings is in keeping with the general design. Customers will be interested to know that the arrangement of the various departments that obtained in the old Lombard Street establishment has been followed in the new one. Entering from Gracechurch Street, one finds the counter for pass-books and current accounts on the left-hand side, with the paying cashier next, then the receiving cashier, fixed deposit department and others, until the securities department and sub-manager's room are reached. On the opposite side are the outward and inward bills departments, loans, etc. Here the most noticeable difference is the larger desk accommodation, three rows on either side behind the counters, an arrangement which will obviate the congestion experienced for so many years at Lombard Street. At the end of the ground floor facing the principal entrance are the offices of the joint managers, Sir Charles Addis and Mr. H. D. C. Jones. Both rooms are furnished in identical style—two handsome rooms in which the managers should be pleased to meet their friends and the Bank's clients. Below these rooms, a half-flight of stairs below the level of the ground floor, are the rooms for the correspondence and telegrams departments, both again affording ample space for these important and hitherto overcrowded departments. There are two basements. In the lowermost is one of the strong rooms and several rooms for the storage of documents, besides the boilers and engines for heating and lighting the building. In appearance, this reminds one somewhat of the stokehold of a steamer. There is another strong room in the upper basement and other storage rooms; but what will attract the visitors' attention most on his first visit to this portion of the building are the very fine lavatories and other offices. Few modern buildings in London are better equipped. Another noticeable feature is the large mess room, well lighted from the street, and the latest patented arrangements for dressing and disrobing rooms. Each member of the staff will have his own locker, and the arrangements of these lockers have only to be seen to be admired.

At the time of writing, the first floor was still unfurnished, or, at least, contained only some furniture convenient for the banquet "At Home" at which the managers and officers of the Bank received their numerous guests. Entrance to the upper floors is obtained by a fine flight of stairs or by lifts connecting with the ground floor and the basements.

Mention should be made of the finely wainscoted and handsomely furnished committee rooms reached by a short flight of stairs from the main floor and situated immediately above the rooms of the joint managers. In the centre is a magnificent walnut table, and the white marble fireplace, beautifully carved, is indeed a work of art. In time, it is to be expected, the panels in this room may be further decorated with the portraits of the men, former directors and chief managers, who were responsible for the founding of the Bank and bringing it to its present high pitch of prosperity. When not engaged in discussing the affairs of the Bank, the members of the Committee may step out upon a white marble balcony and survey "the busy traffic of the mart" that is being transacted on the main floor of the building.

The general effect produced upon the visitor to the building for the first time is one of sumptuous comfort. There is no ostentation, yet no one could leave the Bank without expressing a feeling that it is a prosperous institution of the highest standing in the banking world. Convenient for its London customers, it provides a comfortable and commodious place of business for its staff, and for many years, even in this city of fine mercantile buildings, it will retain pride of place as one of the most modern and best equipped business houses in London.

On 22nd October it was opened by invitation to shareholders and the representatives of city firms doing business with the Bank, who were welcomed by the highly esteemed and ever popular London Joint Manager, Mr. now Sir, Charles Addis, and shown over the building and also entertained to an exceptionally well-prepared and well-served luncheon. No speeches were indulged in, but the entertainment formed a remarkably pleasant meeting of many interested in China, Japan, and India-China and the trade of the Far East. Notwithstanding that for foreigners China is not what it was in the brave days of old, everyone seemed in the highest spirits, many lingering on till the afternoon was well gone.

Few if any of those who shook hands with Mr. Addis were aware that the newspapers of the next morning were to announce that His Majesty had been pleased to confer on him the honour of Knighthood, an honour which everyone who knows Sir Charles or has followed his career will say was never better deserved.

Sir Charles' honour is very much appreciated by the Bank staff, and on his arrival at Lombard Street, the morning the announcement appeared in the London dailies he was accorded a rousing reception. The members of the staff ranged up at their desks, and when the new knight appeared he was greeted with ringing cheers. This unexpected and hearty reception nonplussed him for a moment, but grasping the situation he doffed his silk hat and bowed his way in real knightly fashion along the central aisle all the way from the door to his managerial room.

At the time of writing, the first floor was still unfurnished, or, at least, contained only some furniture convenient for the banquet "At Home" at which the managers and officers of the Bank received their numerous guests. There is no ostentation, yet no one could leave the Bank without expressing a feeling that it is a prosperous institution of the highest standing in the banking world. Convenient for its London customers, it provides a comfortable and commodious place of business for its staff, and for many years, even in this city of fine mercantile buildings, it will retain pride of place as one of the most modern and best equipped business houses in London.

On 22nd October it was opened by invitation to shareholders and the representatives of city firms doing business with the Bank, who were welcomed by the highly esteemed and ever popular London Joint Manager, Mr. now Sir, Charles Addis, and shown over the building and also entertained to an exceptionally well-prepared and well-served luncheon. No speeches were indulged in, but the entertainment formed a remarkably pleasant meeting of many interested in China, Japan, and India-China and the trade of the Far East. Notwithstanding that for foreigners China is not what it was in the brave days of old, everyone seemed in the highest spirits, many lingering on till the afternoon was well gone.

Few if any of those who shook hands with Mr. Addis were aware that the newspapers of the next morning were to announce that His Majesty had been pleased to confer on him the honour of Knighthood, an honour which everyone who knows Sir Charles or has followed his career will say was never better deserved.

Sir Charles' honour is very much appreciated by the Bank staff, and on his arrival at Lombard Street, the morning the announcement appeared in the London dailies he was accorded a rousing reception. The members of the staff ranged up at their desks, and when the new knight appeared he was greeted with ringing cheers. This unexpected and hearty reception nonplussed him for a moment, but grasping the situation he doffed his silk hat and bowed his way in real knightly fashion along the central aisle all the way from the door to his managerial room.

At the time of writing, the first floor was still unfurnished, or, at least, contained only some furniture convenient for the banquet "At Home" at which the managers and officers of the Bank received their numerous guests. Entrance to the upper floors is obtained by a fine flight of stairs or by lifts connecting with the ground floor and the basements.

Mention should be made of the finely wainscoted and handsomely furnished committee rooms reached by a short flight of stairs from the main floor and situated immediately above the rooms of the joint managers. In the centre is a magnificent walnut table, and the white marble fireplace, beautifully carved, is indeed a work of art. In time, it is to be expected, the panels in this room may be further decorated with the portraits of the men, former directors and chief managers, who were responsible for the founding of the Bank and bringing it to its present high pitch of prosperity. When not engaged in discussing the affairs of the Bank, the members of the Committee may step out upon a white marble balcony and survey "the busy traffic of the mart" that is being transacted on the main floor of the building.

SUPREME COURT.

IN APPELLATE JURISDICTION.

Before the Full Court, Sir Wm. Rees Davies, K.C. (Chief Justice), and Mr. Justice H. H. J. Gompertz (Puisne Judge).

QUESTION OF SECURITY.

The case was mentioned of Ho Shan Yan, by Ho Cheng Shi, his next friend, curator, and guardian and administrator of the estate and effects of Ho Wo Lam, alias Ho Wan Ping, deceased (in forma pauperis), and Ho Yan Lam, alias No Ngok Lan. Judgment was made for an order for security of costs in Chambers and defendant appealed against that order.

Mr. C. G. Alabaster, instructed by Mr. Reader Harris (of Messrs. Wilkinson & Grist) was for the defendant, and Mr. M. W. Slade, K.C., and Mr. F. C. Jenkin, instructed by Mr. Haywood (of Messrs. Leo D'Almada e Castro), supported the application.

Mr. Alabaster explained that of the 24th October judgment was given against the plaintiff in that case, and he now appealed against that decision. He then proceeded to quote law on the matter and a lengthy legal argument followed. Judgment was reserved.

LUKONG CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER.

SEQUEL TO A GAMBLING RAID.

At the Magistracy yesterday, before Mr. J. R. Wood, a Chinese constable, by name Lau Cheung, was charged with the manslaughter of Li Sam, during a gambling raid on the Praya East.

At the inquest on the deceased evidence was given that the deceased was struck, kicked, and prodded with a truncheon, the present defendant being identified by the witnesses as the man who assaulted him, and the jury expressed the opinion at the close that the man had been struck, whereupon the present charge was brought.

Mr. Crew (of Messrs. Hastings & Hastings) appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. W. E. L. Shenton (of Messrs. Deacon, Locker, Deacon & Harston) defended.

The Medical Officer at the Mortuary, Dr. MacFarlane, gave evidence concerning his examination of the body of the dead man. There was a bruise on the top of the head, such as might have been caused by a fall, bruises on both knees in front, and the left kneecap was displaced. There were no other visible bruises. The skull was not fractured, and the brain showed no signs of injury. The heart was flabby and fatty. The liver, spleen, and kidneys were all diseased, showing chronic venous indigestion. Death was due to shock acting on a fatty heart.

In reply to Mr. Crew, witness said he was aware of the allegations of the prosecution, that deceased either met his death by being thrown down to the ground or that whilst on the ground he was prodded with a truncheon by a Chinese constable, but he saw no bruises or marks to bear out the allegations. He thought that even a slight blow might have caused death in the general condition of the deceased's health. Very slight blows might have been inflicted by the truncheon without producing bruises. A bruise more often showed when a bone was next the skin.

In answer to Mr. Shenton, the doctor said that the mere hue and cry raised when the police raided the premises might have caused the shock and then death. Any sort of shock, he thought, might have caused the death of the man. If the deceased had been prodded hardly he would have expected to find some bruises on his body.

Evidence was then taken of a similar nature to that given at the inquest, and the case was adjourned.

SUICIDE OF A PORTUGUESE POET.

A special telegram to the Express (Paris) on the 17th ult. from Genoa stated that the Portuguese Consul, General Joaquim Arago, committed suicide at midnight by shooting himself at a cafe. He was well known as a poet.

THE DISSOLUTION OF THE KUOMINTANG.

THREE HUNDRED MEMBERS UNSEATED.

The J. C. Daily News correspondent sent the following telegram on the 6th inst.:

Three long Presidential Mandates were issued last night. They are of a momentous character and deal with President Yuan Shih-kai's position relative to Parliament, denounce the Kuomintang and order its dissolution. The name of C. T. Wang is specially mentioned. The police were at his house all last evening and his arrest is expected. The three Mandates, which were published just before midnight last night, contain a total of 6,500 characters. All the Chinese secretaries to-day are busily engaged translating the Mandates. The following are extracts taken from a comprehensive summary which appeared in the Peking Daily News this morning.

PLOTTING AT HEADQUARTERS.
The first Mandate states that the Chief Court Martial has submitted several dozen coded telegrams which were exchanged between Li Lich-chun and Hsu Hsiu-chun and other Members of Parliament in Peking. The President is greatly struck with the monstrous iniquity of these communications and attributes the recent rebellion to plotting at the headquarters of the Kuomintang.

He attributes to the Kuomintang the intention to invite foreign intervention after the outbreak of the rebellion and to secure the separation of north and south. The President, being contrasted with the grave task of preserving peace, cannot adopt a passive attitude and allow evildoers to continue having their own way. He therefore orders the headquarters of the Kuomintang to be closed (the police last evening searched the Kuomintang quarters and secured papers. They sealed the premises. Rumour states that bombs were found, but this is not confirmed), while the Tutuhs and police authorities of the provinces are ordered to close the branches within seven days.

TO BE HELD AS REBELS.
The Kuomintang party throughout the country shall be dissolved and anybody issuing printed matter or making speeches or holding secret meetings in the name of the Kuomintang shall be dealt with as rebels.

The Kuomintang Members of Parliament whose names were on the list of the party after the outbreak at Hukow are all deprived of their seats, and the Minister of the Interior, Yang Tu, is ordered to give instructions to the election authorities to send fresh candidates to fill the vacant places.

The effect of the order will be to depose nearly 300 members.

ILLEGITIMATE WORK.
The second Mandate denounces the Kuomintang as a party that used illegitimate means of inducing people to join it. The President is compelled to dissolve it because he feels that the country could never be safe while such a party is in existence.

He admonishes the provincial authorities not to debar really capable and upright persons from holding office simply because they were once members of the Kuomintang. Magistrates are ordered to warn people not to take the opportunity to avenge private wrongs upon former members of the Kuomintang.

THE SEIZURE OF THE PARTY.
The third Mandate is the longest issued since the revolution. It traces the transition of the Tungmenghui into the Kuomintang and mentions the President's supposition that the latter would no longer partake of the nature of a secret society, but that he has been grievously disappointed.

When ordered to expel rebel members the Kuomintang only excommunicated a few leaders, retaining General Niu Yung-chien and forty-nine others who actively led the rebellion, thereby proving their desire to ignore the Presidential will.

Here follows a summary of the above-mentioned telegrams, relating to measures for opposing the President, the distribution of money among Kuomintang Members of Parliament, the occupation of the southern provinces for the defence of the Central Government and detailed plans of rebellion.

The mandate proceeds that members of the Kuomintang took advantage of their position as legislators to devise means to protect rebel associates by introducing Bills for the protection of Members of Parliament. It states that Chang Chi and Wang Chong-ting joined Dr. Sun Wen and General Huang Hsing in an attempt to destroy the Quadruple Loans, their object being to make the country bankrupt.

Kuomintang members also refused to ratify the Sino-Russian treaty, all their actions being calculated to overthrow the Government.

THE PRESIDENT'S OATH.

After further relation of the offences of the Kuomintang, the Mandate declares that persons once belonging to this party who repeat and start their lives afresh and betake themselves to peaceful pursuits shall not be harmed. It concludes:—

"I the President, swear faithfully to adhere to the policy expressed in my inauguration speech. I will instil new life into the Republican Government, so that the people and the country shall for ever enjoy peace and prosperity."

The three Mandates are signed by the President, the Premier and the Minister of the Interior.

The Premier is stated to have signed under duress. The effect of the first Mandate is to unseat about 300 members in both Houses, thereby practically eliminating all opposition to the production of a Constitution consonant with the wishes of the President. Reserve candidates will take the places of those unseated, but the probability is that many of these reserve members are of the same political colour.

AN UNCONSTITUTIONAL STEP.
The remarkable step taken by the President is decidedly unconstitutional, but the persons affected, so far as can at present be judged, do not complain and indeed appear to have regarded something of the kind as inevitable.

It should be observed that some of the motives attributed in the Mandates to the Kuomintang leaders are not correct, while it is obviously unnecessary to saddle the whole guilt where possibly only a few are guilty. The authenticity of the incriminating telegrams is of course not established in a law court.

Foreign official opinion is reserved on the matter, as it concerns internal affairs. But the disposition is to approve whatever steps the President thinks necessary for the security of the Government. Whether the means to that end now employed will result in strengthening Yuan Shih-kai's position, or in making his future task more difficult, remains to be seen. The air is full of rumours regarding the dissolution of Parliament and changes in the Ministry. But these should be accepted with reserve.

Some members of the Kuomintang have been missing from their homes since yesterday, but there is no information to show that they have been arrested. There were no quorums in either House to-day, but an informal meeting with closed doors was held by the Chungyuan (House of Representatives).

PRESIDENTIAL AUDIENCES.
This morning's Official Gazette contains the rules to be observed by persons granted an audience by the President. They are worked in the Imperial manner and provide the positions to be taken at various points of the compass, bowings at set moments and so forth. They are doubtless intended to cover the forthcoming first visits of the foreign plenipotentiaries, and it will be interesting to see how far they prove acceptable by the Diplomatic Body.

Yesterday the House Controller of the Imperial Household, Yuan Hsu, was besieged by a crowd of several thousand Manchus, who declared themselves without money, clothes or food, owing to the Government not having made the promised provision for them.

EAST v. WEST.

THE YELLOW RACE PROBLEM IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Sir Richard McBride expressed to a Daily Graphic representative recently his confident hope that the Oriental problem in British Columbia would be set right without international complications. It is one of the many questions the Premier has been dealing with during his visit to England, which ends to-day. British Columbia in this respect has a good deal in common with the State of California, which recently had considerable controversy over legislation at Sacramento with regard to the acquisition of real estate by Japanese settlers. "In British Columbia," explained Sir Richard to the Daily Graphic representative, "it is both a social and an economic question. We are treating it as a matter of local concern. We who are charged with the settlement of the lands and the development of the fisheries and mines and forests, and have constitutional authority to deal with those industries, feel that we are in duty bound to preserve their development for the white peoples. Our desire all the time is to build up a strong British community composed of the white race. Our accomplishment of that purpose would be greatly impaired, if not rendered impossible, if we encouraged the settlement of an unlimited number of persons who may cross the Pacific."

WHERE THE YELLOW MAN WINS. "Everyone knows that the Japanese or the Chinese can sustain himself on a great deal less than even the thriftiest of our own people; consequently if we come into competition in the labour market, the white man loses, and the yellow man wins. For this economic reason, no other course is possible than the one we have pursued, resolutely prohibiting to Asiatics any substantial part in our local affairs. "It is impossible for white and yellow blood to assimilate. That is the national aspect of the question. The two races cannot marry. We cannot build up a population through a mixture of that kind. No one is to be found on the Pacific Coast who would attempt such assimilation. Our attitude, however, is in no sense offensive to Japan or China. The subjects of both those Powers have the protection of law in British Columbia, and many of their settlers have won the respect of the community. Nor can we see where there is the least justification for interference by the Japanese or the Imperial authorities in the work we have undertaken to do. The Japanese do not desire the settlement of Britishers in Japan; our feeling with regard to Japanese immigration is only the same as that felt by Japanese towards white settlers. Japan is for the Japanese, and Canada for the Britisher."

Downing Street, no less than Ottawa, realises that the people of the Far West are firm in their convictions on this subject of Oriental immigration. The question of immigration is one that so far the Parliament of British Columbia has not been able to deal with efficiently, but we are in hopes that without any international complications it may yet all be set right."

CANADA AND THE NAVY. There was a large attendance at the City Carlton Club's "one-hour lunch" yesterday in honour of Sir Richard McBride. Mr. Worthington Evans, M.P., presided. The company included Sir John Barker and Mr. T. P. O'Connor. Speaking of trade, Sir Richard McBride said that while 40 per cent. of Canada's exports came to Great Britain, only 20 per cent. of Canada's imports were from the Motherland. As a Canadian keen on a theme of Empire, he strongly suggested a better adjustment of things. He also advised British firms to show greater elasticity. "Don't send us things you make, but send us articles we need, and if you have not got them make them." Referring to railway expansion, he said the Panama Canal would bring many advantages to British Columbia, which was an illimitable warehouse of the world's essentials. The future of the Dominion was never brighter; and there never was a time when the Imperial question deserved so prominent a place. As a Canadian, he was assumed of his country when the Senate rejected the Navy Bill. "From what I can learn and see," he declared amid loud cheers, "you may expect that the subject will be taken up again by Mr. Borden, and in substance there will be forthcoming from Canada in the next few months what was expected in the spring."

THE JAPANESE NAVY AND ARMY.

MORE COSTLY EXPANSION DISCUSSED.

According to the Tokyo Asahi it is an open secret that Japan is determined to enlarge her navy at the ratio of twelve against twenty-one battleships of the United States. At present the Japanese military authorities are also making up their programme by taking Russia as a standard. As a result of the recent tour of inspection made by Major-General Akiyama in Mongolia and East Siberia the Premier Yamamoto is reported to have abandoned his policy in that direction and to have realized the necessity of strengthening Japan's position on the Continent from a military standpoint. Meanwhile the Japanese naval authorities, are alarmed by the news that Russia has decided to enlarge her navy on a large scale and in the next session of the Imperial Diet a Bill for enlarging the navy is expected to be submitted by the naval authorities.

The Chugai Shoinyo says that according to the new naval programme, particulars of which have not yet been made public, the annual defrayment will be as follows:—

	Yen.
1913	6,000,000
1914	8,000,000
1915	14,000,000
1916	51,000,000
1917	13,000,000

Total 93,000,000.
The paper further states that in future the Japanese naval authorities contemplate organizing two Battleship Squadrons, each comprising eight vessels of some 30,000 tons each. The expenditure for a battleship is ¥3,000,000. In naval circles the view is expressed that the Amortization Fund, which is fixed at ¥5,000,000 each year for the redemption of foreign and domestic loans, should be abolished and that part of the fund be utilized for the expansion of armaments. —Japan Gazette.

LADY'S ADVENTURES IN CHINA.

Having just returned to England from an adventurous trip of two years' duration in China and Mongolia, Mrs. Bulstrode has narrated some interesting experiences to a newspaper representative. She states:—
The qualities required when off the beaten track in those countries are courage, perseverance, good temper, and a sense of humour. The Chinese coolie becomes friendly and obliging once his humour has been tickled. "I went into places where no white people had ever been seen," said Mrs. Bulstrode, "and was able to get into touch with the real life of the people. Starting with six coolies and a boy I set off into the province of Fukien, a country as primitive as you can find anywhere. The only means of conveyance was a sedan chair, and the average rate of progress was about four miles an hour, with every chance of being deposited in the village street when the bearers felt inclined for their midday meal. Then a curious and evil-smelling crowd would press closely round, flogging clothes and jewels, and by the time I had finished I had become quite indifferent to dirt and smells. Curiosity is one of the most trying characteristics of the Chinese. It was the only thing that ever led them to commit a breach of good manners; otherwise they are the most courteous people I have ever met. "I had one or two narrow escapes. Once, in an anti-foreign district, great exception was taken to my camera. For black people, if I put their heads into the black box, and sent them away over the water their bodies would have to follow, and they did not want to leave their homes. It was rather an uncomfortable moment, but ultimately I put away my camera, and they left me alone. Once or twice I diverted attention by doing lightning caricatures that put them into a good temper at once."

In Mongolia the method of travelling is only to be recommended to people untroubled by nerves. A few boards nailed across solid wooden wheels served for a conveyance, said Mrs. Bulstrode. Across the shafts runs a long pole, which Mongol runners, men and women, place across their stomachs, and then, three abreast, six in all, dash along such narrow tracks as exist, charging boulders with unconcern, utterly heedless of the passengers, who hold on as best they can. Our stopping places were Mongol encampments, where the hospitality was almost embarrassingly. The women were most friendly, beautifully dressed with gorgeous jewels and silk robes, but their huts were filthy.

The "new woman" of China is a creature to be avoided, in Mrs. Bulstrode's opinion. The reaction from comparative slavery to freedom in accordance with Western ideals has been too much for her. She has thrown her natural modesty to the winds, and is both noisy and vulgar. At present she is in the minority, and only found in the big towns and ports, and is looked upon with considerable disfavour by her men folk.

BELOW PAR: THE IDEAL RESTORATIVE.

Despite all ordinary precautions, people constantly get run down, with the result that work and play alike becomes irksome in the extreme. At such times, the tonic par excellence is Sanatogen, because, as a physician writes in The Medical Press and Circular: "Sanatogen is readily absorbed by the stomach, and has an immediate and remarkable effect shown by a steady increase of body weight and of muscular strength and energy. At the same time, the colour is brought back to the patient's cheeks. These statements prove Sanatogen's power in improving the blood, revitalising the nervous system, and restoring the physical strength. Because of its remarkable properties, over eighteen thousand physicians have testified in writing to the beneficial results. These patients have likewise borne unimpeachable testimony to the effects of Sanatogen. The Rt. Hon. Thomas Burt, M.P., a member of E.M. Privy Council, and one of the most distinguished men in England writes: "I have used Sanatogen for some time, with most excellent results. I have found it most useful as a tonic when I have been run down." Sanatogen may be obtained of all Chemists, in bottles of two sizes.

BRITAIN'S GRE. AT NEW WARSHIP.

THE OIL-BURNING SUPER-SHIP.

H.M.S. Queen Elizabeth, the super-ship of the British Navy, was launched at Portsmouth last month by Lady Meux, wife of the Commander-in-Chief. Numerous crowds witnessed the ceremony. So huge was the battleship's bulk that the launching-stand had to be moved back, until it towered over the roof of an adjoining workshop. Up in this eyrie Lady Meux, surrounded by a brilliant company of naval and military officers and their ladies, broke the flower-laden bottle of wine on the ship's stem. The brief religious service over, Lady Meux cut a cord, down fell a heavy weight, knocking out the retaining dog-shore with a heavy thud, and releasing the ship, which began to run down the ways amid the cheers of the spectators and the music of the band.

Seven thousand odd tons the vessel's hull weighed as it took the water, and there was an anxious time for the officials until the great mass was safely afloat. Splashing heavily timber into match-wood as she slid over the ways, the Queen Elizabeth took the water splendidly, but as she plunged in, so great was her bulk and weight, the displacement of water caused a heavy backwash that sent big waves rolling up on the shores long distances away from the launching place, tossing heavy ships about as though they were cork-shells.

STRIKING CHARGES.
The Queen Elizabeth is the largest British battleship ever launched, and her design embodies some striking new features which make her the most up-to-date warship in the world. She will, for example, be the first vessel to be armed to fight aircraft (a battery of specially designed guns are given her for this purpose) and to be protected against them as well, for in action her crew will be under cover of a central battery, which gives overhead protection from dropping bombs, as well as side protection against gunfire. Again, she will be the first ship to mount the new 15-inch guns, of which she is to carry four pairs. The offensive power of this weapon is enormous. Her torpedoes, fired from four tubes, will be of the latest two-hy-one inch pattern. Heated air propelled them, and they have a long effective range, with double the speed of the older weapons. For speed and accuracy, in fact, there is no torpedo in existence like them. The appearance of the ship shows that she is built for speed. Her bows differ from those of the other super-Dreadnoughts, and her lines show that sustaining high speed has been one aim of the ship's designers.

FIRST OIL BATTLESHIP.
She will burn oil fuel only, being the first battleship in the world to do this. It is anticipated that oil alone will enable her to maintain a steady twenty-eight knots per hour without any of the falling off and spurring up again that occurs in coal-burning ships.

The Queen Elizabeth will be 640ft. long. She displaces 27,500 tons, and has a beam of 94ft. Her secondary armament for use against torpedo craft will be sixteen six inch quick-firing guns of a new pattern, which can be relied on for straight-hitting at 10,000 yards range.

The great battleship which Lady Meux launched at Portsmouth has one feature which distinguishes her from all her predecessors. She is driven by oil fuel only. By that means it has been possible, without largely increasing displacement and while increasing her gun-power, to give her the speed of a battle-cruiser. She is designed for 25 knots; she is expected to make 28.

Her characteristics are as follows:—

Queen Elizabeth. 27,500 25 15-in. 15,600 16 4-in. 16 6-in. The weight of broadside is that of her big guns only. The Queen Elizabeth is far ahead of all contemporary ships except the Japanese Fuso, which is superior in weight of broadside, but inferior in speed. Her superiority to the German König is overwhelming; but it is only fair to say that the newer ships of the German Navy will make a much nearer approach to her. The most interesting point about the Queen Elizabeth class, however, is their complete reliance on oil fuel. They are designed for a special purpose, as the fast wing of a battle-fleet, in which fact is contained an interesting revelation as to the evolution of tactical thought in the Navy. Oil will give them not only a much higher speed, however, but also a largely increased radius of action. It is estimated that the Queen Elizabeth will exceed the Dreadnought by about 60 per cent, and the Dreadnought steamed to the West Indies at high speed and had 1,000 tons of coal in hand on arrival. It is, therefore, obvious that, so soon as we have assured sources and stores of oil, such ships as these will be pre-eminently fitted for the "whole-world service" of the Empire. At present, however, we have not these sources and supplies, and they are not yet in sight. Most people, therefore, regard the return to coal in the new class of battleships as a return to sanity. Let us now endeavour to forecast what the Queen Elizabeth signifies for the future. Is she, or is she not, in the true line of evolution? Or is she the last word of a type likely to disappear? Although, for the time being, there is a return to coal, she heralds the coming of the oil age. The advantages are too precious to be thrown away, and, when the oilfields of the British Empire in the East are fully developed, the Imperial Patrol, based on Singapore or some such port, and guarding the outer marches of the Empire, may well be an oil-burning fleet. It will be thus better equipped to traverse long distances, and it will require a much smaller personnel, thus overcoming one of the main difficulties in the way of an Empire Fleet. But the steam-driven vessel using oil as fuel is but the product of a transition period. The internal combustion engine is the next step, with all its manifold advantages—further reduction of personnel, greater invisibility, wider arc of training for the guns. That is not far distant. And when internal combustion engines of sufficient power to drive big ships are perfected, there is no reason why the principle of the submarine should not also be adapted to them.

THE BIG SHIP.
Submarines already approach 1,000 tons in displacement, mount guns, carry "winders." It only needs a suitable engine for them to progress to ten thousand or twenty thousand tons. The big ship there will always be; but there is no reason why the big ship should not have the advantages of invisibility on approach and invulnerability which the power of submergence will give her. At first we shall go back to tonnage. The clearing away of funnels; the saving of weight in machinery, and the decrease in the number of personnel will enable the offensive power of the Queen Elizabeth to be obtained on a much smaller displacement. But the old process will only begin again, and large sizes will once more be reached. But, looking far ahead, it is possible to anticipate the day when Navies will consist of whales and sea-birds, manœuvring either in the air or on the water or beneath it. If so, the Queen Elizabeth represents the last word of the old type, in so far as she is of unperfected armament and speed, and the first word of the new, in that she is to burn the fuel which will render possible the later developments foreshadowed.

FOOTBALL.

D.C.L.I. BAND v. D.C.L.I. BUGLERS.
Played at Happy Valley yesterday. The rivalry between the two sides and the match turned out to be a "local Derby." What the players lacked in knowledge of the science of the game they made up for by their enthusiasm and keenness and this was kept up to concert pitch by the shouts and instrumental music (!) of their excited supporters.

The sides were:—
D.C.L.I. Band:—Cann; Wilcox and Briscoe; Sergeant-Smith, Alexander, and Wall; Wright and Nightingale, Stone Candler and James.
D.C.L.I. Buglers:—Giltzes; Bowler and Palmer; Clarke; Gregory, and Golding; Walls and Looney, Jackson, Outmore and Williams.

The Buglers went off with plenty of dash, and Outmore, Looney, and Gregory all looked to have chances. Wright broke away for the Band, however, and beat Giltzes after the latter had made some good saves. This was all the scoring up to half-time. Jackson equalised within five minutes of the re-start, but from this point the Band became the aggressors. Twice more they scored, finally running out good winners by three goals to one. Cann, Briscoe, and Smith in defence, and Wright and Candler in attack were good for the "Drums," and Giltzes, Bowler, Walls, and Golding were prominent Buglers.

Mr. F. W. Eager was the referee.
